Dear Members,

Dear Colleagues,

It is with great pleasure that we welcome you to Antwerp for the 21st ENCATC Annual Conference “Rethinking Education on Arts and Cultural Management”. Over the next three days from 5-7 November, hundreds of academics, researchers, professionals from the cultural and educational sector, arts-culture organisations, students, policy makers, artists and media from more than 51 countries will come together to share expertise and experiences, to gain new knowledge, and enlarge their professional networks. This conference is also organised under UNESCO’s patronage in recognition of ENCATC as a valuable partner in the implementation of UNESCO’s priorities and in advancing the Organisation’s efforts in the area of culture.

The focus of this year’s Annual Conference stems from ENCATC’s wish to address for its part, the ongoing crisis that has left no country untouched. But as we are witnessing, a crisis that is prolonged and continues is in fact a mutation. Five major mutations are intertwined and visible at this time: a geopolitical mutation (emergence of Asia); economic (globalization), biological (genetic revolution), technological (digital revolution), and ecological (depletion of resources).

In this new context education is faced with the challenge to fulfil its mission adequately, but also to contribute to a smart, sustainable and inclusive growth in Europe. Digitalisation and globalisation are opening new market opportunities, in particular for universities, small businesses and cultural organizations.

Higher arts education institutions’ reform of study programmes should be based on a different philosophy of training: from traditional teacher-led approaches to more integrated approaches that take into account the actual reality of the profession where cultural operators are increasingly asked to engage in different professional tasks (“portfolio career”), or operate in a self-employed context.

The recent communication from the Commission “Rethinking education: investing in skills for better socio-economic outcomes” published in November 2012 calls for creating new capabilities for this new scenario: “The broad mission of education and training encompasses objectives such as active citizenship, personal development and well-being. While these go hand-in-hand with the need to upgrade skills for employability, against the backdrop of sluggish economic growth and a shrinking workforce due to demographic ageing, the most pressing challenge for Members States is to address the needs of the economy and focus on solutions to tackle fast-rising youth unemployment”.

In this new scenario, how should education evolve? Which skills and expertise should education in the cultural management and policy field provide for encouraging smart, sustainable and inclusive growth in Europe and beyond? How could networks in the field of culture and education contribute to reform and modernisation of the educational system? How could networks also create capabilities to stimulate the sector’s ability to innovate through the exploration of fresh and unconventional connections between the creative, business and academic spheres? These are just some of the questions that will be analysed and debated during this International Conference.

To debate these important issues the ENCATC Annual Conference will begin on 5 November with a keynote speech by Jan Truszczynski, Director General for Education, Training, Culture and Youth, European Commission who will present how European policy makers are rethinking higher education in these changing times.

In order to gather the reactions from academics and practitioners to this important European Communication, to be inspired by their vision on how to prepare the next generation of arts-cultural managers, and how to meet the needs of the arts-cultural market, ENCATC has organised a roundtable that will gather confirmed academics and cultural experts: Milena Dragicevic Sesic, University of Arts in Belgrade, Fabio Donato, University of Ferrara, Sue Kay, Researcher and trainer, Annick Schramme, University of Antwerp / Antwerp Management School, and Hans Waege, Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra.

To conclude this first day, the 10th Cultural Policy Research Award Ceremony will be held to promote and celebrate excellence and innovation for early career cultural policy researchers. One of the six CPRA finalists will revealed by the international jury and be Awarded 10.000 EUR to carry out his or her winning research proposal. This moment will also be an opportunity to discover the new future outline of this prestigious Award after 2013.

On the second day, 6 November, to better understand the challenges faced by cultural leaders in their day to day management, we will discuss how to rethink leadership in arts and cultural management institutions. ENCATC has invited keynote speakers Hilary S. Carty from ICCE (Institute of Creative and Cultural Entrepreneurship) at Goldsmiths, University of London and Serge Dorny, General Director of the Lyon Opera to share their expertise and experiences in order to encourage thought and discussion.

Building on the success of previous conferences, the programme in Antwerp also includes the 4th Annual ENCATC Research Session which aims to share the latest trends and developments in arts-cultural management and policy research. Now in its 4th year, the Annual ENCATC Research Session clearly proves to be perceived internationally as an important gathering of established and emerging researchers from Europe and around the world. This year, 27 researchers from 17 countries were invited to present in Antwerp, chosen from over 50 submissions.

The afternoon programme will begin with the popular and interactive Annual Cultural Seminars, each to reflect on rethinking education within the framework of ENCATC’s eight Thematic Areas. These seminars will also offer the participants the possibility to contribute to the work done by the Education & Learning Working Group of the Access to Culture Cultural Sector Platform in 2013. For this purpose the participants of the parallel seminars will also analyse and debate how it will be possible to empower individuals with the appropriate educational tools, skills and competencies, for their active cultural, political and economic participation in society in Europe and beyond.

Each seminar will by followed by a corresponding study visit to one of Antwerp’s flagship cultural institutions to foster connections with the local cultural scene to learn from direct experiences of cultural operators. This will also be a unique opportunity for each Director of the visited cultural organisations to present to the participants their educational programmes that promote access to culture.

The second day will conclude with a reception and a performance by a young local jazz artist.

Knowing the importance to share good practices, on the third and last day of the conference, ENCATC members and partners will present their ongoing projects. Afterwards, the reflection on competencies and skills will continue with a dynamic panel discussion on “Which education for tomorrow’s cultural mangers: Are skills and competencies enough?” This final session of the ENCATC Annual Conference is also the concluding event of a 2-year project, CREA.M (Creative Blended Mentoring for Cultural Managers), funded by the European Commission’s Leonardo da Vinci programme. Over the past two years, 8 partners have reflected on rethinking how to foster creativity and entrepreneurial skills for cultural managers based on the mapping of competencies needed in the cultural sector. After the panel, conference participants will learn about CREA.M’s project outcomes which serve as an inspiration to anyone looking to transform how they approach learning and professional development in the cultural sector.
This 3-day event has been made possible thanks to the generosity and unwavering commitment of our member and local organiser: the University of Antwerp and the Antwerp School of Management. In particular, our most sincere gratitude goes to Annick Schramme who has been essential in successfully leading the local team composed of Laila De Bruyne and a number of volunteers: Sarah Bonnaraes, Jacob De Bruyne, Lennart Deroo, Hanne De Meyer, Evelien Dockx, Ellen Forrier, Nicole Fux, Hadywych Hernalsteen, Jasmijn Lahaye, Danique Moonen, Laura Simons, Fien van Houtven, Valerie Vervoort, and Frieda Wyns.

ENCATC would also like to acknowledge with great respect and give thanks to the members of Annual Conference’s Scientific Committee for their intellectual contribution to the programme: Blanka Chládková, Giannalia Cogliandro Beyens, Manuèle Debrinay-Rizos, Gerald Lidstone, Hans Mommaas, Cristina Ortega, Jaakko Pitkänen, Annick Schramme, and Katla Segers. Their continued commitment and contributions to the content design of this conference was essential for the realization of this event.

Our sincere gratitude goes to all the keynote speakers who kindly accepted to join us in Antwerp and share their expertise and knowledge with us: Hilary S. Carty from ICCE (Institute of Creative and Cultural Entrepreneurship) at Goldsmiths, University of London; Serge Dorny, General Director of the Lyon Opera; and Jan Truszczynski, Director General for Education, Training, Culture and Youth, European Commission.

ENCATC is also very grateful for the time, dedication and intellectual contribution of the ENCATC Thematic Area chairs who co-produced the 7 parallel cultural seminars and study visits. We also thank all the invited cultural seminar experts who have kindly accepted to share their knowledge and first-hand experiences during the seminars and study visits.

ENCATC wishes to deeply thank Jacques Bonniel, Giannalia Cogliandro, François Colbert, Fabio Donato, and Cristina Ortega Nuere for their support in the organisation of the 4th Annual ENCATC Research Session, very efficiently coordinated by Elizabeth Darley.

We would like to thank our members and partners who will participate in the Project Presentations session on 7 November.

Our warm thanks also goes to the CREAM Creative Blended Mentoring for Cultural Managers project partners who are contributing to different sessions of the ENCATC Annual Conference with their experience and knowledge of this unique project, to the final session on 7 November, and to the overall nourishment of the conference’s debate on skills and competencies.

From the ENCATC Brussels office, ENCATC acknowledges Elizabeth Darley and Costanza Caffo for their professionalism and efficient support in the implementation of this major international event. Our recognition also goes to our trainees Alejandra Munguia Salazar and Carles Castellar for their enthusiasm and fresh energy in preparation of material for this conference.

This conference is made possible thanks to the support from the European Commission’s Culture Programme. ENCATC is extremely grateful for the long-lasting recognition from the European Commission and we look forward to future synergies.

To celebrate the milestone of the 10th Cultural Policy Research Award, ENCATC also thanks the kind generosity of the European Cultural Foundation, the funder of the Award in partnership with ENCATC.

We believe this Reader and the conference outcomes will help all participants to better understand challenges of education and training in the arts-cultural sector. Furthermore, this is an important opportunity to contribute to the debate and collect opinions and concrete ideas from our members and main stakeholders attending this event about two key questions: “How should education evolve in the field of arts and cultural management for today’s varied and unpredictable career paths?” and “How could we efficiently prepare the next generation of arts-cultural managers to meet the needs of the arts-cultural market?”

Our hope is that this event will also actively contribute to the flourish of new synergies and projects among the many participants present in Antwerp.

A WARM WELCOME
from the University of Antwerp

Dear ENCATC members and Participants,
Welcome to Antwerp!

The Faculty of Applied Economics of the University of Antwerp is thrilled to co-host the 21st International ENCATC Conference on the education of Arts and Cultural Management.

We have a firm commitment to arts management education and research, and we recognize the vital role that expert management of arts and cultural organizations has on society. We are proud of the Master in Cultural Management. Over the years, it has produced competent people who combine solid business knowledge with a passion for and understanding of the unique management challenges inherent in arts institutions and in cultural and creative industries. For the individual creative entrepreneur the Antwerp Management School started a new education program called ‘creative jumpers’ to develop the entrepreneurial and managerial skills and knowledge among these creatives.

Antwerp’s dynamic arts and cultural scene reflects the long cultural tradition of the city and the vibrant creativity today: from the new heritage museums, called the MAS and the Red Star Line, to the Royal Opera House and our fashion designers. Experience the energy yourself!

We are honored to have the world’s scientific leaders in arts and cultural management education with us in Antwerp.

Prof. dr. Rudy Martens
Dean of the Faculty of Applied Economics

A WARM WELCOME
from the Flemish Minister for Culture

Dear Conference Participants,
Welcome to the ENCATC conference that will take place at the University of Antwerp! As the Flemish Minister for Culture, I gladly support research in the management of Arts and Culture and education in cultural management. Although interest in the management of Arts and Culture has been growing since the last decade of the 20th century, there is still a lot of work to do. For example, despite numerous efforts, cultural participation hasn’t grown in the last ten years in Flanders. It remains an important challenge for cultural organisations to find and to broaden their public. How can marketing & promotion ameliorate this? How can we reach the many different (sub)cultures in our society?

Aside from the audience, the organisations must also pay attention to the artist. His position has become more shaky in a world with great expectations and growing competition. Especially in financially difficult times, cultural organisations must not only manage their activities efficiently but they also need to be creative in finding different resources. Therefore they need certain competences & entrepreneurial skills (in human resources, marketing, accountancy,...) which haven’t always been the first priority. But these competences are usually latent in the organisations and can easily be triggered and valorised.

In a globalised world, these challenges also create new opportunities. As policy makers, we invest in the cultural and creative industries, based on the insight that the cultural and creative industries are dynamic sources of innovation, growth and structural change in the so-called new economy. The United Nations’ Creative Economy Report 2010 shows that the export of creative products and services has more than doubled between 2002 and 2008. In Flanders the creative industries embody this important evolution. Researchers from the Antwerp Management School calculated that the creative industries in Flanders represent - with 24 billion euro - 3% of the Flemish GDP (Gross Domestic Product), which is in line with the evolution at European level.
Another important evolution that affects the organisation and management of the cultural and creative sector is worldwide digitization. New business models are emerging and the relations between the creator, the producer, the distributor and the consumer are rapidly changing. Last but not least management of cultural and creative organisations should take the train of sustainability, a cause widely supported throughout the cultural sector.

The international network of ENCATC is in a key position to develop answers to the above-mentioned challenges for the education in cultural management in Europe. Over three days, academics and PhD students will present their research about cultural management. They will also, together with professionals and policy makers, rethink the competences that are needed for the education in cultural management at the University of Antwerp.

The output from the 21st ENCATC conference will, I am sure, make a valuable contribution to our understanding of the meaning, function and impact of the management of the Arts and Culture. I wish you a most interesting conference.

Joke Schauvliege
Flemish Minister for Culture

Dear Conference Participants,

Welcome to the city of Antwerp for the ENCATC conference!

We are very glad and proud to host the 21st edition of this important international network on education in the management of the Arts and Culture.

Antwerp is a city with a world port and has a long cultural tradition. Culture and Economy have always gone hand in hand in our city. The most inspiring example is undoubtedly Rubens. He was not just an entrepreneur but a diplomat as well. He travelled all over Europe. He was not only the Spanish king’s favourite painter but also the favourite of Catherine de’ Medici in Paris. You don’t have to be an entrepreneur to understand that this position offers interesting prospects. That arts and trade sought each other out is shown by the fact that as early as 1531 the first Stock Exchange ever was built in Antwerp. It was an absolute trendsetter when it came to its organization and operation and was used as a model for the London Exchange in 1571, the Frankfurt Exchange in 1588 and the Amsterdam Exchange in 1608. Antwerp became a place where the art trade flourished. At that time Antwerp had even more painters than bakers within its walls. The demand for paintings was greater than that for bread.

As the Deputy Mayor for Culture and Economy of the city of Antwerp, I want to build on this tradition of cultural entrepreneurship and I want to promote it among creatives and cultural organizations. Certainly in a context of diminishing public spending, globalization, digitization and important changes in cultural needs and consumption by our citizens, novice cultural managers are faced with distinct challenges and opportunities. With the project ‘Antwerp powered by creatives’, we want to stimulate the networking between creative people and entrepreneurs to create new opportunities for both. With the Master in Cultural Management at the University of Antwerp and the new master class Creative Jumpers at the Antwerp Management School we have also a unique selling position in higher education in Flanders. These programs want to develop the entrepreneurial and management skills of creative people or of people who are not artists perhaps but want to work in this fascinating world. Also ENCATC has an important role to play in bridging the gap between culture, economy and policy in an European context. In the future the exchange of knowledge and experiences about cultural management within Europe will be crucial. It will put arts and culture in Europe on a higher level. This conference is not only an opportunity to deepen academic research and to rethink education programs in this field but can also be very inspiring for the practitioners of cultural management. This interaction and cross fertilization is, I think, very important. I wish you a very interesting and inspiring stay in Antwerp.

Philip Heylen
Deputy Mayor for Culture and Economy of the city of Antwerp

ENCATC’s Annual Conference programme (pages 8-11) will be offering seven parallel cultural seminars. These seminars are co-produced by the ENCATC Thematic Area chairs.

Well known international professionals and experts from top cultural institutions from across Europe, Brazil, Canada, Taiwan, and the United States will be on hand to share their knowledge and expertise with seminar participants.

These seminars provide participants with the possibility to contribute to the work done by the Education & Learning Working Group* of the Access to Culture Cultural Sector Platform in 2013. For this purpose the participants of the parallel seminars will also analyse and debate how it will be possible to empower individuals with the appropriate educational tools, skills and competencies, for their active cultural, political and economic participation in society in Europe and beyond.

Each seminar also includes a corresponding study visit to one of Antwerp’s cultural flagship institutions. These visits are a prime opportunity to gather fresh perspective and ideas from local cultural operators, expand horizons, deepen knowledge and build professional networks. Directors of the visited cultural organisations will also present to the participants their educational programmes that promote access to culture.

The ENCATC Thematic Areas were set up in 2007. They are a space for specialized knowledge in specific fields of Culture and External Relations – Diplomacy, Heritage, Museums, Performing arts, Arts and Wellbeing, Creative Industries, Cultural Data and Urban Management. They are intended to share experiences - enhance collaboration - keep in touch with peers - aid research - make new contacts - keep up to date with advancements in the field - announce events. Each ENCATC Thematic Area is chaired by an ENCATC member. Thematic Area members total over 700 academics, researchers, cultural operators, policy makers, artists and students who receive weekly updates from ENCATC and communicate through Google Groups and dedicated blogs.

SEMINAR 1 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)

Rethinking education in Cultural External Relations - Cultural Diplomacy programmes: competencies and skills required for future managers

Venue: Vrijdagmarkt 22-23, 2000 Antwerp

There is a growing interest in teaching and creating new curricula in Cultural Relations and Diplomacy. Traditionally there have been many programmes both undergraduate and postgraduate in International Relations but the focus has not been on culture. There are a very few new programmes relating culture to International Relations and Diplomacy however it is expected over the next few years for this to increase as cities, regions and countries need people educated to represent them and engage with others worldwide. Some international cultural organisations now distance themselves from engaging in Diplomacy as that is seen as representing a state or particular culture and uses a specific language but rather engage in Cultural Relations, seen as a more open and mutual activity. Also the state mechanisms of communication through embassies are maybe becoming less effective with the rise of social media and person to person communication. This debate between the impact of Cultural Relations and Diplomacy has been a current one for a few years now and is still in many cases pertinent. Considerable literature is available on the subject and creating bibliographies for study is relatively easy. However when creating a curriculum some things seem essential core learning, other areas less so.

SEMINAR 1 STUDY VISIT: Museum Plantin-Moretus
Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: Vrijdagmarkt 22-23, 2000 Antwerp

It is just as if after 440 years the working day is about to begin for the type founders, compositors, printers and proofreaders in the world-famous printing works. The oldest printing presses in the world are in the Museum Plantijn Moretus, intact and ready to roll. The offices and shop echo with conversations between Christoffel Plantijn and aristocratic and scholarly clients from all over the world. Feast your eyes on the home of the Plantin and Moretus families! Stroll through the drawing rooms, soaking up the atmosphere of life in Antwerp in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and admiring the impressive art collection which includes portraits by Peter Paul Rubens. Continue on your way through the rarefied libraries lined with the breathtaking 30,000 old editions that make up the Moretusses’ collection. Marvel at the magnificent manuscripts and some of the finest examples of European typography.

SEMINAR 2 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)

Rethinking cultural evaluation: going beyond the GDP

Venue: Hanzestedenplaats 1, 2000 Antwerp

This seminar wishes to continue the discussion from the Stiglitz-Sen-Fitoussi Report on rethinking GDP and theRio+20 request to the United Nations system to address the measurement of progress beyond GDP. Can well-being be defined and achieved regardless of individual and collective aspirations, identities, rootedness, creativity and the freedom of expression? What about the free-flow and exchange of ideas, diversity, access to culture and knowledge, and participation? How can the cultural dimensions of well-being be integrated into measuring progress beyond GDP? The UN General Assembly in its Resolution 65/309 entitled “Happiness: Towards a Holistic Approach to Development” was conscious that the pursuit of happiness was a fundamental human goal and recognized that the indicator of gross domestic product (GDP) was not designed to and did not adequately reflect people’s happiness and well-being. This debate not only applies to which indicators are the most appropriate, but also to the methodology used to design those indicators themselves. This seminar will provide an overview of the state-of-the-art when thinking about culture as an indicator of well-being and development followed by a dynamic debate on rethinking the measurement of the spill-over effects of cultural and creative industries and evaluation of cultural approaches.

SEMINAR 2 STUDY VISIT: Museum Aan de Stroom
Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: Museum Aan de Stroom, Hanzestedenplaats 1, 2000 Antwerp

The MAS Museum Aan de Stroom is a ground-breaking museum that tells the story of the people, the past, present and future of the city of Antwerp and the world. The MAS is a cultural heritage forum that works with various collections and methodologies. It is developing a diverse intramural and extramural programme, the common theme of which involves stories of the river, the city, the port and the world. The MAS is of course first and foremost a museum, but it is also an extraordinary building in its own right, occupying an extraordinary site in an extraordinary location. To walk across the square in front of the MAS is to literally walk on world art! On the Hanzestedenplaats you’ll find a work of art by Antwerp’s most famous living artist: a 1,600-m² mosaic entitled ‘Dead Skull’ by Luc Tuymans, his first public work to be permanently on display.
SEMINAR 3 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)

Rethinking education in Museums and Heritage programmes: competencies and skills required for future managers

Venue: University of Antwerp, Prinstraat 13, 2000 Antwerp, Room A108

The mutation in the field of museums and heritage in a moving context itself requires us to rethink education of professionals by training young people in cultural management (studies) and life long learning. Indeed, besides the scientific staff (curators, researchers) varied activities and services are emerging and developing that also provide work for contractors: the interface with the public through a technology always innovating, fundraising and partnerships, marketing, design and management of meaningful projects. Which skills and expertise should education provide to face this challenge? On what basis should we build consistent profiles that can adapt to the needs of the sector and help to draw careers without ever forgetting the mission of service to the public of museums and heritage? How could cultural managers, professionals and stakeholders in the field become more involved in defining what skills are needed?

SEMINAR 3 STUDY VISIT: Rockox House Museum
Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: Rockox House Museum, Keizerstraat 10, 2000 Antwerp

The Rockox House is a museum of art history, a contribution from KBC to preserving the Flemish cultural heritage and a witness to one of the most important periods in the history of Antwerp, from the Fall of Antwerp in 1585, with the subsequent closure of the Scheldt, to the Peace of Munster in 1648, which marked the final separation of Northern and Southern Netherlands. It was the home of Nicolaas Rockox (1560-1640), a key figure in the politics, society and culture of the first half of the 17th century. The furnishing of the house demonstrates the interest Rockox had in archaeology, and Roman history in particular, as well as in humanism and his patronage. Several artists enjoyed his patronage and today still serve as references to the prosperous baroque period the city enjoyed. The museum opens up its collection and its garden for the enjoyment of a broad and diverse, local, regional and indeed international public.

SEMINAR 4 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)

Rethinking education in Culture & Creative Industries programmes: competencies and skills required for future managers

Venue: University of Antwerp, Room E122, Kleine Kauwenberg, 2000 Antwerp

What constitutes the ‘mismatch’ between the needs of the CCIs and the skills of creators, artists and cultural managers entering the CCIs? Where exactly are problems located? Is there also a justified distance between the more general objectives of higher education and the specific needs of the sector? What does lifelong learning have to offer to cultural managers, artists and creators? Who is responsible for improving the skills base of artists and creators? In general, three types of skills are being identified as lacking: entrepreneurial and business skills; digital and specific new media skills and communication and negotiation skills. There is a great divergence of opinions: graduates complain about lacking essential technical skills for jobs; education argues that technology changes faster than curricula etc. This seminar will explore these questions and will hear from experts and stakeholders in CCI with the ultimate goal to advance the debate on these issues.

SEMINAR 4 STUDY VISIT: MOMU Fashion Museum
Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: Nationalestraat 28, 2000 Antwerp

The Fashion Museum is sheltered in the ModeNatie in the Nationalestraat. From the beginning the MoMu has opted for a dynamic approach that exceeds the static character of the average museum. The starting point for each new exhibition is an overall concept, focussing not merely on clothing but on an entire context: the designer’s various sources of inspiration, links with other art disciplines, and so on. No static glass cases, but a dynamic room that is tailored to the needs of each exhibition. This vitality is the very strength of the Antwerp Fashion Museum. The building in which ModeNatie is housed, goes back to the 19th century and was originally designed as a storehouse for the men’s and children’s clothing company New England. In 2000 it was decided that the premises be thoroughly renovated under the leadership of the Ghent architect Marie-José Van Hee.

SEMINAR 5 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)

Rethinking education in Performing Arts programmes: competencies and skills required for future managers

Venue: Het Toneelhuis, Komedieplaats 18, 2000 Antwerp

The main topic to be discussed during this year’s Performing Arts Thematic Area Seminar will focus on leadership in the education process. Primarily the leadership of teachers in the classroom, but also on educating the future leaders in the performing arts area. We want to raise a fruitful discussion on how leadership needs to change and how this could be done at the level of higher educational institutions to educate leaders able to work in the cultural market once they get their diploma, since it is known that the leadership positions in performing arts are the most requested. But also – educating the future leaders what it means to be a leader oneself, so this seminar also aims to focus on the process of building up leadership competencies of (future) teachers in the performing arts field.

SEMINAR 5 STUDY VISIT: Het Toneelhuis

Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: Het Toneelhuis, Komedieplaats 18, 2000 Antwerp

Toneelhuis sees itself as an artistic micro-society which makes up-to-the-minute theatre about the here and now. It sees the world as its oyster, Antwerp as its home base and the Bourla theatre as the hub and heart of its operations. Toneelhuis aspires to be the hallmark of artistic excellence both nationally and internationally. Though at the centre of the performing arts scene institutionally, it is at the spearhead of innovation and experimentation. The artistic differences between the makers and their various artistic disciplines are still the creative engine of the house. Using a very personal and contemporary theatre language the Toneelhuis-makers go in search of inspirational, critical and alternative ways of dealing with today’s complex reality and come up with a whole host of answers.

SEMINAR 6 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)

Rethinking education in Cultural and Sustainable Development programmes: competencies and skills required for future managers

Venue: De Kathedraal, Groenplaats 21, 2000 Antwerp

There is a growing public awareness on the importance of cities as nodes in European and global flows of capital, migration, ideology and culture. Cities are increasingly seen as sites in which new forms of identity can be created and co-exist – for example through the promotion of innovative design and new architectural developments, culture-led urban regeneration and creative management of public space. Currently we also observe a process of rescaling of governance and growth of the potential role for cities as a driving force for social change in a new ‘European society’. Therefore, the dynamics of European cities in a range of contrasting contexts, related to various forms of inclusion-exclusion, requires closer attention in order to understand contemporary processes of socio-cultural change and the potential for managing such change in the urban environment. Current European enlargement and integration processes suggest the need to rethink implications of the new multicultural context, particularly to minimize the negative effects of this new cultural situation of constantly growing and less manageable diversity. Arts and creative activities are of profound significance in this process of promotion of inclusive European citizenship as instruments for social cohesion and reintegration. This is due to their value added to stimulate positive cultural identities and to afford opportunity for self-expression and self-determination of different sections of the population, including various disadvantaged groups. Having this in mind, how do we need to rethink the educational offer in the field of cultural policy in order to prepare the future generation of cultural operators and local administrator to answer to the future challenges cities and regions have to face?
SEMINAR 6 STUDY VISIT: De Kathedraal
Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: De Kathedraal, Groenplaats 21, 2000 Antwerp

Not only is Antwerp’s cathedral the largest Gothic church in the Low Countries, it also tells a story of glory and prosperity – and even more so one of sorrow and disaster. This is the story of people who built dreams, people who expressed their allegiance to God and their fellow men. For over a thousand years, Mary has been the patroness of this Cathedral and of the city of Antwerp; each year thousands of people come and express their love and sorrow to Mary. This church is much more than just a museum filled with valuable treasures, it is still an active place of worship.

SEMINAR 7 // Wednesday, 6 Nov. (15:00 – 16:30)
Rethinking education in Arts and Health - How to transform culture into wellbeing and employment: competencies and skills required for future managers

Venue: Ballet van Vlaanderen, Westkaai 16, 2000 Antwerp

In Arts and Health there is a challenge that is very wide as specific education is needed both in BA and MA levels as well as in continuing studies and in adult education. As the working environment and culture is very diverse one hand in arts, on the other hand in health, there is a need to concentrate on developing transversal skills. In many European countries there are several studies in the skills and competencies needed in Arts and Health is mapped. From arts/cultural manager’s point of view, the challenges in financial management and entrepreneurship are a part of the arts and health project development. The topical questions are: Which skills and competencies an arts/cultural manager will need to work within Arts and Health? What is his/her role in the field? What are the needs for research in the field from arts/cultural managers’ point of view? As seen in the piloted arts and health projects a central need is to find ways to enhance creative ideas into sustainable practices and entrepreneurship. When turning the pilot into innovation with a more sustainable status along with new employment we need to focus on financing models, client basis and value chain of production as well as the service development.

SEMINAR 7 STUDY VISIT: Red Star Line Museum
Wednesday, 6 Nov. (16:30 – 17:30)

Venue: Red Star Line Museum, Montevideostraat 2, 2000 Antwerp

Did you know Albert Einstein was among the 2.5 million passengers, mostly migrants, who took the Red Star Line's ocean liners from Belgium to America between 1873 and 1934? The Red Star Line Museum invites visitors on an eventful journey in the footsteps of emigrants. Become acquainted with the passengers and accompany them on their trip from their native village to Antwerp. The ocean steamers of the Red Star Line are docked on the quay ready to depart for the New World and learn exciting and personal stories. The museum opened his doors on 28 September 2013, after a restoration period of three years. The local and historic story of the buildings and the Red Star Line shipping company are linked with the universal theme of human mobility in the draft proposal Red Star Line, People on the Move.

ABOUT ENCATC

WHO WE ARE
With over 100 members in 40 countries and 3,000,000 multipliers, ENCATC is the leading European network on Arts-Cultural Education and Research. Founded in 1992, ENCATC represents all disciplines in the arts and culture, is an NGO holding the status of official partner of UNESCO and of observer to the Steering Committee for Culture of the Council of Europe. Through eight thematic forums, a wide range of projects, activities and events, ENCATC offers academics, researchers, cultural operators, students, artists, and policy makers a platform to transfer knowledge and share ideas, projects, methodologies, experiences and research. In line with its mission and aims, ENCATC activities are structured around five complementary strands of work: advocacy, networking, capacity building, research, and communication.

OUR MISSION
To stimulates the development of cultural management and cultural policy education in Europe and beyond, engaging and responding to new developments in politics, economics, societies and technology."

OUR FOCUS
Through eight Thematic Areas, a wide range of activities, events and projects, ENCATC contributes to the professionalisation and sustainability of the cultural sector. Together with the Thematic Areas, ENCATC also stimulates innovative thinking by researching trends and developments that affect the future of arts and culture, by supporting businesses and organisations with strategy development by means of scenario planning, and by developing new curricula, services and business concepts based on these scenarios. The eight ENCATC Thematic Areas focus on: Creative & Cultural Industries, CCI • Heritage • Cultural Indicators • Museums and Audience Policies • Culture External Relations & Cultural Diplomacy • Urban Management and Cultural Policy • Arts & Health • Performing Arts Management.

OUR ACTIVITIES
To achieve our goals, we work along the following five complementary strands of activities:
1. Developing and influencing policy
ENCATC engages in advocacy actions through partnerships, advices, policy recommendations, consultations, meetings with institutions and public speeches. For the past 20 years, ENCATC has been a key partner for constructive dialogue with UNESCO, the Council of Europe, the European Commission, the European Parliament and Member States. Since 2008, ENCATC has been an active member both of the European Platform for “Cultural and Creative Industries” and “Access to Culture”. Additionally, in 2011, to press Europe to invest more in cultural heritage, ENCATC joined the Alliance 3.3. improvements.

2. Networking
ENCATC provides educators, researchers, students, artists, cultural operators and policy makers with a number of opportunities to meet, initiate long lasting partnerships and projects and exchange experiences, methodologies, curricula, pedagogy and practices. ENCATC creates bridges for cooperation between stakeholders from the educational, economic and cultural sectors to prove its strong belief that meaningful partnerships are the foundation for success and enable institutions and people to make continuous improvements.

3. Capacity building
ENCATC offers its members opportunities to enhance and strengthen their knowledge, skills, competencies and abilities through a wide range of activities and projects. On an institutional level, ENCATC uses its knowledge and experience as a European network to facilitate other cultural organisations in becoming more established and prominent European players. ENCATC also coordinates a high level pool of experts for a peer to peer learning exchange inside and outside the network. To foster the reform and modernisation of the education systems ENCATC publishes the PRAXIS newsletter for students, manages a number of mobility programs, and runs a mobility Fund.

4. Strengthening the European research area
ENCATC promotes access, publishes and widely disseminates research in cultural management and cultural policy. ENCATC also ensures that research feeds into policy making and decision makers have a better understanding of cultural policy and educational issues and ways to address them. As part of its commitment to strengthening the European Research Area ENCATC manages the Cultural Policy Research Award and an annual Forum for young researchers. It also publishes a Journal on cultural management and cultural policy, the enca/SCHOLARS bulletin and organises an annual Research Session for established and emerging cultural management and cultural policy researchers.

5. Building knowledge societies
ENCATC transforms information into knowledge. It creates, collects and disseminates information inside and outside the network through a number of tools including a monthly newsletter, a constantly updated website, blogs, social networks, a Journal, publications (ENCATC Book Series) and a bulletin. Since its creation, ENCATC has significantly improved access to arts and cultural management and cultural policy worldwide as well as bibliographies on arts and cultural management and cultural policy.

BELGIUM // Project Partner, ENCATC

ENCATC is the leading European network on Arts Cultural Education and Research. It is a membership NGO gathering over 100 members in 39 countries. ENCATC holds the status of associate partner of UNESCO and of observer to the Steering Committee for Culture of the Council of Europe. ENCATC was founded to promote education and training in the field of cultural management and cultural policy by providing educators, researchers, students, policymakers and cultural managers and operators with a long lasting forum for debates and professional networking. ENCATC also aims to contribute to the professional development of arts and culture managers and operators by sharing best practices and by disseminating research and case studies. ENCATC provides a platform for cultural and creative industries professionals and businesses to collaborate and develop new educational and training programmes and services for the cultural sector. ENCATC is the leading European network on Arts Cultural Education and Research. It is a membership NGO gathering over 100 members in 39 countries. ENCATC holds the status of associate partner of UNESCO and of observer to the Steering Committee for Culture of the Council of Europe.

ENCATC's key objectives are to:
- Develop and influence policy through policy documents and expertise;
- Encourage links and create synergies between members through networking events;
- Contribute to the professional development of staff and students through activities and projects;
- Promote transnational research through activities and publications;
- Foster the mobility of staff, students and artists inside and outside Europe through a number of mobility programmes.

In the CREA.M project, ENCATC has the double role of disseminating the project results and outcomes, but also to use its network of members as direct users and as a pool of end-users for the project's research and outcomes.
I think it’s really important to be upfront with your mentor about your expectations. I wanted to be in a space where I could express myself to an active listener who could provide insightful feedback and provide essential advice on my career path, but not that I felt ownership during the mentoring process. Of course this is a mentoring relationship so it was equally important that my mentor enumerate his expectations too: ensuring career plan, actively listening, and sharing ideas and experience.

Being on the same page from the beginning with similar expectations was a great start. During our meetings, we used a variety of exercises and tools from the CREA.M Blended Mentoring Kit. I particularly liked the BEX tool — behavioral exercises and tasks intended to change a mentee’s behaviors and habits, the Skills Assessment Exercise to identify my strengths and weaknesses, and the Self-Assessment Exercise to evaluate my personal and professional goals. Each tool and exercise helped me realize my skills relevant to the cultural field, my abilities as a cultural manager, my strong and weak traits, my tolerance for risk and more attributes about myself that I was not attuned to before the start of the CREA.M Mentoring Programme. I think only once you have a more honest and greater perception of yourself and understanding of your values and goals can you really identify, evaluate and respond to opportunities that will propel your professional career.

This programme has also been a fantastic opportunity to have an experienced cultural manager as my mentor tell me about his personal and professional goals after he graduated from university. His background and insight provided me with a different point of view. I feel fortunate to learn from his past experiences, mistakes and situations he wished he had handled differently and apply the knowledge to my own situation and circumstances. He is mid-way through a career and his full-time role, which I do in the cultural field, is more focused on a job in the cultural field and less on the personal and professional development that is necessary for success in the cultural field. His mentor, who I have been in contact with for the past year, is from the same administration as mine. To my advantage this meant there was already an established professional familiarity. However, we had both been told of the importance of trust and honesty. I was wary of an established professional relationship but realized that it was an integral part of a successful mentor-mentee relationship. To my advantage, this meant there was already an established professional relationship between me and my mentor. It was just like a friendship.

At the beginning I thought a “mentor” was just like a life coach and saw the action of “mentoring” as another form of guidance. Thankfully, the CREA.M’s Blended Mentoring Kit for mentees had a section dedicated to defining mentoring in the context of this particular programme, which I found to be especially useful when you think how cultural and linguistic nuances shape our understanding and how we communicate. The kit also included a bibliography and links on the topic, along with examples of how mentoring is approached in other countries. I fully realized how mentoring had a bit different, more subtle meaning than I had previously thought. I hadn’t really considered the informal transfer of knowledge and the personal development that also goes into elaborating values relevant to my career and professional profile.

Another form of guidance, thankfully, is the career advice and information that I received from my mentor. She has her Master’s in English Language and Literature from Pamukkale University. She currently works for the Denizli Special Provincial Administration, a CREA.M partner. This is her first time participating in a mentee programme and she looks ahead to her future career in the cultural sector.

CREA.M’s Creative Blended Mentoring Programme was developed to help cultural professionals improve their employability and support their understanding of the cultural sector’s complexity. Since March 2013 CREA.M has been in a 6-month pilot phase to test the project’s unique mentoring kit. 18 mentors and 18 mentees are participating from the Czech Republic, Finland, Italy, Spain, Turkey and the United Kingdom. In pairs, they are taking part in a series of 6 face-to-face and 5 virtual meetings aimed at supporting the mentee in taking responsibility for his or her career and professional and personal development by fostering entrepreneurial skills and creative thinking.

In this section a first time mentor and mentee share their experiences as they participate in CREA.M’s Mentoring Programme using the CREA.M Blended Mentoring Kit. We learn about their challenges, surprises, achievements and hopes for the future.

Sarah Bucknall is currently a researcher at Goldsmiths, University of London’s Institute of Cultural and Creative Enterprise (ICCE). She has over 15 years experience in the creative and cultural industries. Her skills lie in being able to work collaboratively with organisations to develop creative ideas, research and process raw data into useful and visually accessible formats. This is her first time as a mentor.

When I was approached to be a mentor in the CREA.M Mentoring Programme, I understood that it would involve working with a graduate with an arts background seeking employment. I anticipated the process would have its challenges given the UK’s current precarious jobs market in the arts and culture. My assigned mentee was a recent graduate hoping to progress from her entry-level role. After several unsuccessful job applications and 2 job rejections, she was ready to try another approach to making herself employable in her desired cultural field.

Before the mentoring relationship could begin, all UK mentors and mentees were introduced to CREA.M’s creative blended mentoring process. The CREA.M Blended Mentoring Kit was given to all mentors with explanations of their role, and how to start a mentoring relationship and foster trust. It also included many useful exercises, activities, and personal and professional development tools. We were given access to an online platform that was to act as a virtual meeting place and space to exchange best practices with other mentors. An online diary to be completed at the end of each mentoring session would allow us to reflect on our progress, and the end of each session would be followed by a debrief.

My assigned mentee was a recent graduate with a background in the arts. She was working with a graduate who was looking for a job in the arts and culture. I believe having someone with different life experience, knowledge and connections to use in our mentoring relationship was a rewarding experience. My assigned mentee was a recent graduate hoping to progress from her entry-level role. After several unsuccessful job applications and 2 job rejections, she was ready to try another approach to making herself employable in her desired cultural field.

Stories From A First Time Mentor and A Mentee
Mentoring is a tool for personal development and entails a philosophy based on the relationship of two people (mentor and mentee) in which the former invests his/her time and energy to offer his/her knowledge, experience and wisdom to the mentee for whom these skills may guide him/her to discover his/her true potential and could find it very valuable either in the professional or personal aspects of life. It can be a good asset to enjoy the knowledge, experience and wisdom of the mentor whose role is to assist other people less experienced in the development of their faculties.

The aim of the process of mentoring is to accomplish the maximum development of the mentored person. This means better results from the worker as such and as a consequence better results for the organization – and that offers new challenges and opportunities for the organization itself and its staff.

The challenges and opportunities offered are ambitious but motivating and obtainable which invites people to make an effort to improve and face the objectives. Here the circle begins and the flow of satisfaction and efficiency maintains a virtuous continuity.

As mentioned above, mentoring is a tool for personal development and entails a philosophy based on the relationship of two people: the mentor and the mentee.

Here are some specific aspects which determine and define the process of mentoring:

1. Mentoring is based on the genuine conversation between two people, in which one of the two assumes the role of mentor and the other of mentored. The aim of the conversation is to facilitate the development of the mentee. The mentor asks questions in order to reinforce strengths and deal with weaker aspects, challenges, etc.

2. The end of the process is to find out and focus on the experience, concerns and challenges of the mentored person. The whole process consists of many meetings and discussions of mutual interest, during the first of which the mentor helps the mentee to answer the questions that the mentor helps the mentee to answer in order to strengthen his/her capabilities, as well as to develop his/her professional and vital experience. By means of exchanging questions and answers, the mentor helps the mentee to discover his/her potential and to develop his/her potential. The whole process of mentoring is based on the genuine self-assessment of the mentored person and the mentor.

3. Having said all the above, during the first mentoring sessions it is crucial to establish a friendly relationship among the mentor and the mentored person. It is essential for the mentor to be a well-balanced individual and to have the personal and professional development of the mentored person. It is essential for the mentor to understand the needs and expectations of the mentored person. The mentor helps the mentee to think and find the answers. The mentor must be capable of mediating the relationships for which reasons the metacognitive process of mentoring helps the mentor to develop his/her skills in order to improve the analyses. The mentor must be capable of mediating the experiences of the mentored person and to develop his/her skills. The mentor must be capable of mediating the experiences of the mentored person.

4. The mentor must be capable of mediating the experiences of the mentored person.

5. The mentor must be capable of mediating the experiences of the mentored person.

6. The mentor must be capable of mediating the experiences of the mentored person.

7. The mentor must be capable of mediating the experiences of the mentored person.
The current economic crisis is an important backdrop to consider regarding cultural managers finding stable employment. Unemployment affects all the countries part of the survey and, as expected, the data collected by many of the partners indicated a lack of job opportunities in the cultural sector. However, on a positive note, our Turkish partners reported that, in their country, culture was an emergent and growing employment market. In my opinion, within the European setting, it is increasingly important for cultural managers to be mobile and to be able to work beyond national borders and will lead to personal and organisational enrichment. In this sense I highlight the need to develop language and intercultural skills (see for example the Language Rich Europe project at www.language-rich-europe.eu or the British Council report research_march_2013.pdf, and, of course, CREA.M’s project website).

Overall, the results of the mapping stage also made us understand that in many countries there is a need for better data collection and aggregation and that there are benefits from harmonisation of indicators and methodologies at the EU level.

Are there fundamental skills and attributes that were desired in cultural managers regardless of country or cultural sector?

The data obtained from the national surveys indicated that the balance of knowledge, attributes, skills and competencies constituting a competitive advantage on gaining employment in the cultural sector in the different countries and cultural sectors is diverse and complex. Our Czech partners critically advanced a ‘magic’ profile for a job candidacy advanced, a ‘magic’ profile for a job position: a manager, a strategic manager who is heterogeneous, with a strong profile, has the ability to work in a multicultural environment, manages projects, with a network of contacts, with a good sense of responsibility, with a great ability to influence and to solve problems.”

Today we are immersed in turmoil of change, from new challenges to changes which make organizations hesitate on which attitude to adopt in relation to their business markets. There exist many organizations which are observant of the weaknesses they suffer in order to compete and are unable to find the key to focus back on the target to progress. Cultural organizations present even greater challenges: difficulties to acquire financial backup, complexity to attract audiences, changes in trends among the new generations, together with a vast variety of cultural proposals. Under these circumstances, we consider that mentoring can be an effective tool.
The CREA.M project aims at mapping the competencies needed in the cultural sector by involving different stakeholders and from there elaborating a creative blended mentoring programme deployed into learning outcomes to foster creativity, entrepreneurship, and intercultural skills for beneficiaries. During the project's first phase beginning in early 2012, the consortium researched and mapped skills needed in the cultural sector in seven European countries. The results helped to design the project's Blended Mentoring Kit to educate and train professionals in the cultural labour market, with special attention given to the need for entrepreneurial skills and competencies.

The Institute for Creative and Cultural Entrepreneurship (ICCE) at Goldsmiths, University of London was the leader for the project's research phase and was responsible for the report's content. The key objective of the report was to summarise the information from the various national surveys and provide a broad overview of the skills, competencies, and attributes needed by cultural managers working in the present very competitive labour market in the seven surveyed countries. The report was used to orientate the definition of the blended mentoring kit that is currently in the pilot testing phase of the CREA.M project.

The role of the Institute for Creative and Cultural Entrepreneurship (ICCE) at Goldsmiths, University of London was the research lead of the project. The Institute was responsible for the report summarising the findings. Dr. Carla Figueira, Director of the MA Cultural Policy, Relations and Diplomacy and Director of the MA Cultural Policy, Relations and Diplomacy at the Institute, was responsible for the report. My role in relation to the research phase of the CREA.M project was to undertake the UK survey, by interviewing cultural managers and analysing documentary sources, and, specifically in relation to the summary report, to analyse the different national reports and write the final report, in collaboration with the Director of ICCE, Gerald Lidstone.

What are the key recommendations/outcomes to come out of this report?

The objective of the report was to summarise national findings and contribute to the development of the following stages of the project. The key recommendation of the report pointed to the need to discuss and provide more attention to blended mentoring (face-to-face and online) in each of the national contexts involved in the project. Mentoring in the CREA.M project is a ‘box full of differences’ from which we can all collaboratively learn.

Mentoring is defined and used in the different countries in a range of ways, it can be used to support job seekers (self-evaluation of competencies, bridging of skills, improvement of interview performance, increase motivation), to integrate professionals in organisations, for professionals to reflect on the development of their careers. The main thing that people need (AS, 2013) is to feel free to express myself, to create, to feel that I’m looking around and inside me at 360°. I feel that working with the CREA.M programme has been still the most of the time where I’ve found the most of the time where I’ve felt an impact. By using the capacities of the cultural managers working, the CREA.M programme offers the opportunity to make the most of it. The CREA.M programme is an innovative project that involves 18 cultural managers working as mentors with 18 mentees. The project has been developed to ensure that all the information from the different European partners will be summarised in national reports. The interviews with Dr. Carla Figueira, Director of the MA Cultural Policy, Relations and Diplomacy at the Institute, offer insights into the CREA.M project and its outcomes.
The CREA.M project was conceived with the ambition of developing a mentoring programme that could work with people who feel disengaged but with strong ambitions to work in, or further develop their careers in the cultural sector. The CREA.M Blended Mentoring Kit for mentors and mentees was the outcome of this ambition, designed to develop and support mentors and mentees in their mentoring relationship.

One of the difficulties to overcome, and a unique element of the programme is that a common framework for the mentoring process had to be created between all partners, that took into consideration the process of selection, recruitment, matching and training content. The design of the programme also had to take into consideration the different cultural backgrounds, diversity of sector and layering of concepts rather than a conventional narrative. The CREA.M project has ambitions to engage this sense of exploration, encouraging curiosity and finding answers that might be unexpected through processes of creative play. Over time the programme gives the mentee a personal toolkit which is a range of exercises and tools to help with the process of discovering, exploring and understanding the current understanding of the mentee's professional sector and the gaps in their skills, knowledge and understanding of the different cultural approaches and environments of the creative and cultural sector. PHASES

Phase I. During the first phase, CREA.M researches competency models for the cultural sector to share a new approach and design a new framework to educate and train them, with special attention given to the effectiveness of learning processes activated in informal settings.

Phase II. Next, partners design an innovative training module based on mentoring. CREA.M’s Blended Mentoring Kit is aimed at fostering entrepreneurial skills and competencies. It is based on a one-to-one (mentor-mentee) relationship that deploys learning outcomes in a timeframe of 6 months through a series of face-to-face and online meetings in which shared mentoring tools and practices are used.

Phase III. Finally, partners test the CREA.M’s Blended Mentoring Kit with the involvement of 18 mentors and 18 mentees across 6 European countries with the use of a common mentoring platform. The testing is accompanied by a monitoring and evaluation action to jointly validate the learning process activated through the mentoring process.

TARGET

The CREA.M project is targeted at professionals in the cultural sector, especially those who can’t find stable employment in the labour market. The CREA.M project aims to support individuals by fostering non-formal and informal practices of learning to stimulate and grow entrepreneurial attitudes and competencies. For this reason, the CREA.M blended mentoring is also addressed to support people in the start-up and development of cultural and creative businesses.

CREA.M - Creative Blended Mentoring for Cultural Managers

BACKGROUND

The project focuses on developing an innovative training method centered on mentoring cultural managers to improve their employability and empower them to be more competitive in the cultural sector. The project addresses the European Commission’s Developing Vocational Skills priority by considering the labour market’s needs and the progressive decrease of public investment in the field of culture.

The project seeks to develop a competency model for cultural managers by:

- Involving different stakeholders to align the process of project outcomes and objectives with different stakeholders and partners.
- Building a knowledge environment with different sectors to grow and become sustainable.
- Involving different stakeholders to align the process of project outcomes and objectives with different sectors.
- Developing an updated vision of the competency model for cultural managers.
- Engaging key people holding different job positions in the cultural labour market.

After 8 months of studies, interviews, and exchanges on mentoring approaches and the possibility to empower professionals at different levels through an innovative and informal methodology, the CREA.M Blended Mentoring Kits were ready to be tested by 18 mentor-mentee couples in six countries (CZ, ES, FI, IT, TR, UK).

The project’s results were validated at the final CREA.M conference in Antwerp on 7 November 2013 followed by publication of the final report on the blended mentoring kits.

The project was financed by the European Commission’s Lifelong Learning Programme and involved a partnership of 8 different institutions from 7 countries (including VET and cultural organisations, a SME and a public administration).

The CREA.M project was co-financed by the European Commission addressed to European VET sectors.

This lively debate will be followed by a presentation providing some background on the project’s activities, findings, and outcomes. The day’s session will end with a demonstration of the Creative Blended Mentoring Kit for Cultural Managers to inspire educators, cultural professionals, and stakeholders. We will also hear testimonials from mentors and mentees who participated in the project’s testing phase.

We invite you to read through the following pages for more information about CREA.M, articles from the project’s newsletter, and the profiles of the 8 European partner institutions.

This project would not have been possible without the European Commission’s Lifelong Learning Programme which has provided financial support for this two-year journey for which we are all extremely grateful.

As the project leader, we would like to thank the other partners who have contributed to the success of CREA.M with their intellectual and pragmatic contributions. Their dedication to the project, their strong professionalism, and enthusiasm during the different phases, were highly appreciated as we all worked together to make a greater impact on the arts-cultural sector in Europe. We also wish to thank all of the contributors, including mentors and mentees, some of whom are able to join us today from near and far. We acknowledge with sincere gratitude our panelists who join us today from near and far, for their stimulating discussion! Our sincere thanks go to our project partner in Belgium, ENCATC, and to ENCATC’s Secretary General Elisabetta Cogliandro Beyens for coordinating with the local host university in preparation for this event.

The challenge we would like to take now is to enlarge our network, to involve more people and institutions in the adoption of the CREA.M kit and hence bring more people and professional educators to the network. We enourage everyone to take part in the CREA.M pilot testing phase of the project’s development.

Dear Colleagues,

On behalf of all the project partners, we are delighted to welcome you to the CREA.M Creative Blended Mentoring for Cultural Managers, Final Conference in Antwerp. Over the past two years, 8 partner institutions in 7 European countries cooperated on developing a new approach and methodology in the field of Vocational Education for the management of arts and culture. CREA.M project responded to the need to empower cultural operators and provide them with updated and concrete means to face and proactively respond to the challenges that arise from inside, as well as from outside the complex cultural and creative sector. Its main goal was to define and test an innovative mentoring path to foster the entrepreneurial mindset and competencies of professionals in the cultural and creative sector, with a consequent strengthening of their employability.

As the project is coming to an end, this is an excellent opportunity for the consortium to present and demonstrate the main activities and outcomes of this European project as well as to open a broader discussion on the many ideas and issues CREA.M raises. This event is organised in the framework of the 21st ENCATC Annual Conference, “Rethinking Education on Arts & Cultural Management” (5-7 November), as its themes, presentations, debates, and discussions on the many ideas and issues on cultural education are relevant to CREA.M partners and stakeholders. This event is convened in the euro Centred Management (5-7 November) as its themes, presentations, debates, and discussions on the many ideas and issues on cultural education are relevant to CREA.M partners and stakeholders. Therefore, this event is convened in the framework of the 21st ENCATC Annual Conference, “Rethinking Education on Arts & Cultural Management” (5-7 November), as its themes, presentations, debates, and discussions on the many ideas and issues on cultural education are relevant to CREA.M partners and stakeholders.

Over the first two days of the ENCATC Annual Conference, participants will have already explored new ways and best practices to meet the challenges cultural managers, operators and educators are facing during these times of rapid change. Concluding with the CREA.M Final Conference serves as another concrete example of how to provide a response to the sector’s mutable dynamics. Therefore, it is highly relevant to listen to these findings ENCATC Annual Conference participants, who are academics, researchers, professionals from the cultural and educational sector, arts culture organisations, students, policy makers, artists and media from more than 51 countries to take part in the discussion.

Already on 6 November, ENCATC Annual Conference participants attending the seminar “Rethinking Education in Museums and Heritage Management” will have the intellectual contributions from CREA.M partner, Tuuli Rajavuori from the Finnish Museums Association in Finland and Cristina Da Milano from ECCOM in Italy who participated as a mentor in the project’s testing phase. The panel discussion with a conclusion panel of experts, with a consequent strengthening of their employability.

On behalf of all the project partners, we are delighted to welcome you to the CREA.M Creative Blended Mentoring for Cultural Managers, Final Conference in Antwerp. Over the past two years, 8 partner institutions in 7 European countries cooperated on developing a new approach and methodology in the field of Vocational Education for the management of arts and culture.
